OPEN

HOUSE

20 & 21 September 1997

A celebration of London's architecture
Free entry to over 400 buildings across London.

Open House '97 is a special event which gives Londoners and visitors the opportunity to view, absolutely free of charge, a fantastic array of buildings* of architectural interest which are often not open to the public*. It also gives London a voice in European Heritage Days, a significant European cultural initiative involving forty countries in a Europe wide programme of celebrations of architecture. Open House is an event for all Londoners, an event which expresses our civic pride, celebrates the wealth of wonderful buildings surrounding us and opens doors to their secret lives within.

In this directory you will find a fascinating and wide range of buildings around which to plan your weekend architectural adventure. They include private houses and apartments, cinemas and theatres, government offices and banking chambers, industrial and ecclesiastical buildings, architects' offices, specialised teaching buildings and courthouses - everything from tube stations to palaces.

Support for this event is given primarily by the London boroughs and authorities which share in the aims of London Open House - the civic pride and care for the physical surroundings of our capital and caring about them

PASSPORT TO DESIGN

A pilot scheme to involve schools in the Open House initiative has been launched this year with a grant received from the Design Council on behalf of the Department of Trade and Industry. Further details can be obtained by writing to Open House.

SPONSORSHIP

The event is principally sponsored by the following London Boroughs and authorities: Bexley, Brent, Camden, Corporation of London, Ealing, Enfield, Greenwich, Hackney 2000, Hammersmith & Fulham, Haringey, Havering, Hillingdon, Islington, Kensington and Chelsea, London Docklands Development Corporation, Lewisham, Redbridge, Richmond upon Thames, Southwark, Tower Hamlets, Waltham Forest, Wandsworth, City of Westminster.

Financial sponsorship has also been provided by Advance Reprographic Printers, BUPA, Warner Country Homes & Leisure Villages and Country Living Magazine.

SUPPORT

Substantial support has been given by GLR, the BBC radio station for London on 94.9FM stereo which provides special coverage of Open House '97. It is the only London station making specific broadcasts about architecture every Tuesday morning at 10.40am with Prof. Max Hutchinson).

SPECIAL THANKS

Special thanks go to all the building owners and tenants who have joined in the spirit of the event and have so kindly agreed to open their doors - without them there would be no London Open House. Similarly, special thanks is also given to the RIBA Architecture Centre, London Forum, and The Open Churches Trust and those civic societies who have organised buildings and tours as part of the weekend and last but not least to the hundreds of volunteers who assist you in enjoying your visits by making Open House '97 a weekend of architectural celebration.

\ Churches of particular architectural interest are included in this event as many churches, although thought of as always open are indeed closed apart from services.*

"I am delighted to be associated with the London Open House weekend, a major event in London's cultural calendar which celebrates the capital's great wealth of architecture. London is proud of its tradition of excellent architecture, a tradition which continues to the present day with some of the finest examples of contemporary architecture in the world situated in the capital. Buildings both great and small are included in this event and I am pleased to say that many outstanding Government buildings which are not normally open to the public will participate this year.

This year London Open House is also initiating an exciting programme called Passport to Design. Developed with assistance from the Design Council and in conjunction with various London schools, children will participate in the Open House weekend in a programme which is designed to encourage and develop their understanding and appreciation of architecture, design and the urban environment.

I hope that you will take this opportunity to participate in the Open House weekend. With the hundreds of buildings that are opening their doors this year a fascinating and absorbing two days is ensured for everyone.

Mark Fisher,
Parliamentary Under Secretary of State,
Department for Culture, Media and Sport

London Open House weekend contributes to the English initiative entitled Heritage Open Days (13th and 14th September tel 0891 800 603) which is co-ordinated by the Civic Trust and funded by the Department for Culture Media and Sport. Other events taking part across the United Kingdom in September are Doors Open Days in Scotland, European Heritage Open Days in Wales and Northern Ireland (contact information available on tel 0891 600 061)

TO IDENTIFY BUILDINGS

Look out for posters and banners on buildings.

GENERAL INFORMATION

The boroughs are listed alphabetically, as are the names of the building in each borough with the following information: Title, address, day and time of opening, disabled access, refreshments, toilets available, whether there is a bookshop of one kind or another and if pre-booking is definitely required, description, areas open and transport.

Please note that each building opening is agreed and controlled by the owners - detailed arrangements and security are all in their control and they are at liberty to refuse entry. London Open House '97 cannot therefore accept responsibility for alteration or amendment to building or activity details published here.

ORGANISATION

London Open House is a non-profit making organisation with the primary aim of enabling this event to take place each year. Its aim is to enhance an awareness of London's architecture. The London Open House weekend is achieved through the goodwill and help of many volunteers.
