Welcome to the 20th anniversary edition of Open House London.

Well-designed buildings and public spaces are vital in creating and sustaining a vibrant city, yet 20 years ago there was no way for people to engage with it directly. Direct experience is the most effective way to learn about, understand and argue for quality in the built environment.

Out of this need, the Open House concept was born. It's a simple but powerful one: to show examples of well designed buildings which have a positive impact, regardless of age; to provide direct experience which makes such a profound difference to our understanding; to be free to ensure everyone engages in the 'conversation', not just a few.

Over the years the success of the Open House London weekend has grown and our organisation, Open-City, has grown with it. We have seen how the initiative creates a real bridge between the city, its citizens and the built environment profession. The concept has also been adopted by 25 cities worldwide who recognise it as a powerful tool for engaging with their local communities.

Without the support of all our sponsors, volunteers, property owners, event organisers, and of course every Londoner who has ever joined a queue with the 'green book' in hand, we wouldn't have been able to open eyes, minds and doors to the city.

Our theme this anniversary year is the 'changing face of London' – to reflect on the positive achievements that have taken place in our capital, the lessons that have been learnt and what should be taken forward to make this place a better place to live, work and play.

We are excited in 2012 to be able to reflect on 20 years of Open House and 100 of the most inspiring buildings ever to feature in the event in our new book published with Ebury Press.

In this year's programme itself, more than 750 buildings and events are on offer: we hope you enjoy it – and with something for everyone, we hope to have your support to carry on for at least another 20 years.

The changing face of London

Edwin Heathcote,
Architecture and Design Critic,
Financial Times, reflects on Open-City's 20th anniversary theme

London is a city of radical rebuildings. In the last twenty years it has changed as much as it has in any two decades in its history yet still somehow remains a city of Victorian terraces and Georgian squares, complex medieval streetplans and historic fabric. That paradox, of an ancient framework accommodating a series of contemporary layers makes its particular character.

The last twenty years has seen a huge erasure of the city's post war fabric along with a wholesale redevelopment of the industrial lots which pockmarked the city. Its riverside has changed beyond recognition as entire new city quarters have emerged – Bankside becoming a new cultural quarter, Nine Elms and Vauxhall emerging as residential hotspots and, most conspicuously, the transformation of swathes of East London from deprived terraces and former industrial infrastructure to self-consciously hip enclaves. But most noticeable has been the change in image, the burgeoning skyline of the City and beyond into peaks and troughs of financial activity, like an ECG. The Shard, Western Europe's tallest building, has taken that upward energy over the river and now impinges on innumerable views of the city, a constant reminder of the changes.

The success of Open House over the last twenty years has both paralleled and, arguably, helped to shape, that dramatic architectural transformation. Open House has been instrumental in London's view of its self, in opening eyes and minds to the complexities, the excitement and the vicarious thrill of the otherwise inaccessible building. It has become a mechanism with which Londoners can engage with the fabric of their city, an event which exposes the inner workings of the city like no other. It has exposed the city not just as a network of streets but as an infinitely more complex layering of domestic, commercial, municipal and cultural spaces which together create the palimpsest which gives London its character and allows it to change so fast and so flexibly.

Not every change in London has been for the better. Arguments still rage about the privatisation of public space, about the quality of schools and hospitals commissioned under the controversial PFI programme, about infrastructure and about a skyline which is not to everyone's taste and which can now, in the light of the financial crisis, look like the hubris of big business graffitied mercilessly across the sky. Open House has allowed that debate to take place. Through allowing people in to the temples of commerce alongside some of the city finest dwellings, it has spurred a debate about quality, perhaps pushing some in unexpected directions whilst confirming the prejudices of others. It is a momentary but necessary democratisation of the hierarchy of city space.

At the same time Open-City exists to educate, to encourage discourse and to enlighten and reveal through the rest of the year. Addressing itself to schools and councils, to those who represent the future of planning, Open-City is working tirelessly to enthuse about the impact an informed public can exert over its own environment. The relationship to the city is changing. Landscape and public realm has moved on immeasurably over the last two decades and there is now an acknowledgement enshrined in planning agreements that developers have a responsibility to return some benefit to the surrounding public space, that with building comes responsibility. London has become a younger city, a more cosmopolitan city and a city which lives more outdoors than it ever used to. At the same time interaction has changed beyond all recognition, mobile phones, GPS, iPads and laptops have meant that citizens are connected beyond their immediate physical contacts and each maps their use of the city through positioning and the traces of electronic media. None of these media were around twenty years ago when I was still sitting at a drawing board inking in lines – an occupation which now seems as arcane as writing with a quill. We see cities, use cities and negotiate cities in new and different way. And yet.

And yet cities do what they have always done, bring people together and provide a framework for the creation of culture and communication. Just as London changes, it stays the same. It is recognisably the city of two decades ago yet spikier, denser, more divided and less equal but also more international, a city of better public spaces, with hugely enhanced cultural institutions and less empty sites. It still has potential.

“Open-City is working tirelessly to enthuse about the impact an informed public can exert over its own environment.”

Points of view

"The contrasts of London's architecture are the genius of its beauty. No other city in the world brings together so well the historic and the new, or can delight the eye with a range of styles from Corinthian marble to Modernist steel.

Open House London celebrates this wonderful melange, and gives Londoners a rare insight into the best of our buildings. I fully support its work and wish it every success."

Boris Johnson, Mayor of London

We believe passionately that great design makes a difference to our lives, and our initiatives celebrate all that is best about the capital's buildings, places and neighbourhoods.

Tim Brooks, Chair of Trustees, Open-City

"Good architecture has a huge role to play in altering our mood. When we call a chair or an office beautiful, really what we're saying is that we like the way of life it's suggesting to us. [Open House London], in a modest but determined way, helps to change the debate about what sort of buildings we want to live, work and learn in."

Alain de Botton

"London's skyline is now a unique succession of diverse, exciting shapes, a statement of confidence in visionary architecture and its effect on the spirit of the city and its people. For me this strength more than outweighs some of the less adventurous developments to be seen today."

Margaret Howell, Designer

"This year, investment in landscape has significantly changed the face of London. A massive new park in East London is the setting for the Olympics, the fountain-filled Granary Square is a calm meeting place in the centre of King's Cross, Leicester Square has been reborn and Jubilee Gardens, so long a desolate piece of grass, has a landscape of flowers and trees. This is a rebirth of many of London's most important places and it is regeneration led by landscape."

Paul Lincoln, Director of Policy and Communications, Landscape Institute

"ICE London is delighted to again be working with Open-City to celebrate the important part that civil engineering plays in the success of our city. Every day millions of people walk past or on top of infrastructure which they barely notice but without which London would simply stop functioning. This weekend is an opportunity for Londoners to see behind the scenes, and hopefully will help them appreciate the vital role that civil engineering plays in this great city."

Miranda Housden, Director, ICE London

"One of my favourite events of the year, Open House offers the unparalleled opportunity to step inside the capital's most interesting buildings. The vast selection of buildings on offer span from the intimate to the paramount. This is a first class education in architecture, and it's free."

Christine Murray, Editor, Architects' Journal

"Good architecture and great design in our Centres plays a key part in what we do in supporting people with cancer. We have been involved with Open-City for eight years and it is a privilege to work with an organisation which sees the benefits in – and promotes great architecture."

BBC London 94.9FM

"When Open House throws open the portals of so many otherwise inaccessible London buildings, it also opens our eyes to the surprising variety of architectural wonders in our midst and our minds to infinite possibilities of the built environment. For years now we have covered this staggeringly successful cultural event with relish on my daily show on BBC London 94.9. Every year we receive an avalanche of calls and e-mails from people eager to know more about the opportunities afforded by this unique extravaganza of the edifice. They are hungry to see behind the façades, to learn the tales and the techniques that all buildings have to tell. Which is why queues form round the iconic sites and tens of thousands attend the big ticket tours.

But it isn't just City Hall, Foreign Office & India Office or Lloyd's of London which attract attention. It's countless, usually unnoticed buildings out in the suburban boroughs or tucked down unsung sidestreets.

The true architectural stamp of London is its variety, the clash and the juxtaposition, the old and new, grand and humble jostling for attention and all are available to us during Open House London.

So yet again in nearly every London Borough, volunteers will prepare to open their doors to the inquisitive crowds, aficionados will plan their weekends for maximum exposure and Londoners in general will learn a little more about the city we share.

BBC London 94.9 will of course be with them."

Open House London 2012

Good design plays a crucial role in creating a vibrant and liveable city – a place where people want to live and work. Open House London is the annual opportunity to discover this at first hand, all over London. This year, our anniversary theme is ‘the changing face of London’ – reflecting the huge transformations that have taken place and are happening in this incredible city.

There are over 750 buildings, major construction and engineering achievements, neighbourhood and landscape walks, architects’ talks, boat tours and more to choose from in the main directory. Here are just a few highlights of things to see and do...

East London transformation

Discover all about the transformation of East London and the Lea Valley.

This summer has shown Londoners and visitors what has been achieved with £9bn of public investment into the area. But what about the legacy of the area?

Several expert-led walks, events and openings will showcase the regeneration and investment into emerging communities outside of the Park and into the surrounding neighbourhoods and industrial/leisure landscapes of the Lea Valley.

See the barge tours of the perimeter of the Olympic Site with London Legacy Development Corporation, plus events at Hackney Wick’s White Building. A walk with East London expert Ralph Ward looks at life ‘Beyond the Olympic Park’, whilst the River Princess boat tours show the changes at Royal Victoria Dock, and the huge new Dane’s Yard development site and site tours at Cody Dock will show the transformations starting to take place in this area of East London.

A new short film for 2012 (out 7 September), supported and presented by Margaret Howell with Open-City Director Victoria Thornton, will look at this changing area one year on and post-Olympics, and will explore what might come next to ensure a lasting legacy.

London's Infrastructure

This year we've once again a special showcase of the vital role of civil engineers in building, maintaining and transforming the capital's infrastructure and built environment, in partnership with The Institution of Civil Engineers (ICE). ICE is organising a series of walks, tours and boat trips to celebrate and explore innovative engineering of the past, present and future, including visits to ICE London Civil Engineering Award winning projects.

Infrastructure highlights include major transport and infrastructure at London King's Cross Station, Emirates Airline cable car, Canary Wharf Crossrail Station Construction Site, and the proposed new airport for London on the ICE Hoo Peninsula boat tour

the Thames with the Thames Barrier & Information Centre, the tidal Thames walk with Thames Estuary Partnership, and the ICE Engineering Heritage boat tours

water and waste at Lee Tunnel & Beckton Sludge Power Generator, Crossness Engines House, King George V Pumping Station, Abbey Mills Pumping Station and Southwark Integrated Waste Management Facility

energy at Closed Loop Recycling and SELCHP

ICE Award Winners including Exhibition Road are flagged with their logo in the listings, and in addition, ICE is offering an exclusive opportunity to visit their HQ, on the Friday afternoon before the event kicks off! see p68

Green London

The need to make our buildings more energy efficient is one of the main ways in which London's built environment is changing. Open House London offers a unique opportunity to find out more about low carbon solutions through a wide range of activities and a showcase of exemplary green buildings. Look for 'G' for green features in the listings, the green dot for retrofit exemplars, or find out more at openhouselondon.org.uk/green

London's buildings account for nearly 80 per cent of carbon emissions - making them energy efficient presents huge challenges and opportunities. Retrofitting existing buildings is one of the most important energy efficiency solutions, and it's easier than you think. Many builds on show also have excellent ideas to help create a more sustainable environment, from green roofs and bug hotels, city landscapes and growing communities, to intelligent systems and high-tech gadgetry. You can see measures in action, speak to the experts, and discover how you can implement changes in your own home.

Green highlights include retrofit at 3 Acorns, Chester Road, The Coach House, Bertram Street (see thermal imaging photo, right) and St Augustine's Road and John Thompson & Partners, or the Passivhaus standard 20 Lena Gardens, 100 Princedale Road, and Mayville Community Centre

new build exemplars with BREEAM (the government benchmark) excellent rating at Enfield Town Library, Ravensbourne and Heartlands High School

low impact eco buildings at Growing Communités' Eco Classroom, Adobe Classroom at Hounslow Heath School and Straw bale building at Hackney City Farm

And if you want to reduce your own carbon footprint during Open House and get healthy too, check out an urban jog in Brentford, a cycle tour with artouride, and a ramble in the Estuary

Leading up to the weekend, Open-City's Green Sky Thinking 2012 (17–21 Sept) is a week-long programme of business events giving an inside view from experts and industry leaders of how we could move towards 'greening' entire neighbourhoods, as well as buildings, to inform better decision-making.

London Landscape

In a programme sponsored by the Landscape Institute, this year's event features nearly 50 projects with landscape at their heart. Each one shows how investment in landscape is changing the face of London and delivering exciting social, environmental and economic benefits.

From large-scale public realm projects like the transformations of Granary Square, Leicester Square and Exhibition Road to small-scale community-led edible landscapes like the 'Guerilla' gardens of Elephant and Castle and the Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, exciting landscapes are being created all over London.

Explore the green landscape of the Horniman Museum & Gardens, join a regeneration walk in Dalston, visit the vast green roofs and insect hotel at 20 Triton Street or experience the excitement and fun to be found at Glamis Adventure Playground.

Use the Landscape Map and look for the yellow dots in the listings to discover 20 well-designed landscapes that are delivering beauty, diversity and a sense of place in our busy city.

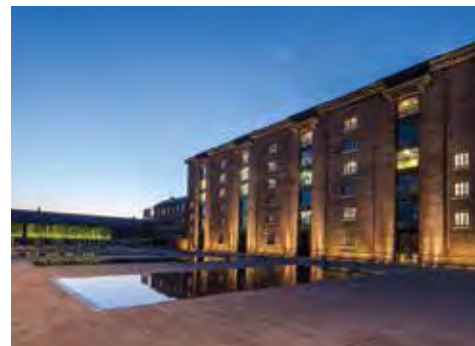

1 Barking and Dagenham 2 Barnet 3 Bexley 4 Brent 5 Bromley 6 Camden 7 City of London 9 Ealing 10 Enfield 11 Greenwich 12 Hackney 13 Hammersmith and Fulham 14 Haringey 15 Harrow 16 Havering 17 Hillingdon 18 Hounslow 19 Islington 20 Kensington and Chelsea 21 Lambeth 22 Lewisham 23 Merton 24 Newham 25 Redbridge 26 Richmond 27 Southwark 28 Sutton 29 Tower Hamlets 30 Waltham Forest 31 Wandsworth 32 Westminster

The Landscape Institute is the professional body for landscape architects. The LI's mission is to build the professional community of landscape architects in the service of the public interest. Its vision is to create a thriving society and environment through inspirational places.

What's new?

Open House is unique in that you see great architecture and design at first hand. Whether it's a renewed look at your own neighbourhood, or exploration of a new area, our open buildings and expert-led tours will affect how you feel about your city and the way we live.

Private homes

With 100 private homes and residential buildings showcased, Open House is your opportunity to get an insiders' view of great domestic design and tips – whether they are contemporary award-winners such as Brick House or In-Between, vintage 50s & 60s designs such as The Cedars Span House and Foggo's St Mary's Road house, or ecohomes (see p8). There's also lots of interesting housing to compare from post-war social housing such as Spa Green Estate, Alexandra Road, Trellick & Balfron Towers to new mixed-tenure solutions such as the huge regeneration project underway at Woodberry Park; whilst the 'I was here – changing face of housing' events take a creative view on the Haggerston Estate in its final hours before it undergoes massive change.

Towers and views

Of course Open House is all about contrasts in type, scale and period – and this year we've yet more exclusives on iconic towers offering incredible views: 30 St Mary Axe (aka the Gherkin), Heron Tower and Tower 42.

International architecture with British Council

This year, we also show the value of good architecture to communities both at home and internationally, and help celebrate the final weekend of the British Council's International Architecture and Design Showcase 2012 with several embassies open and a Symposium of Flanders architecture.

Also, if you want to experience Open House abroad, see openhouseworldwide.org for international events and dates (there are now over 20 worldwide)

Archibus tour with Arriva

We are once again working with Arriva London to bring you a bus tour with a difference. Win a place on an architectural whirlwind tour by historic Routemaster bus with commentary by Royal College of Art tutor and bus driver Joe Kerr. Places are limited so to be in with a chance to win a place on this half day tour on Sunday, answer this: In what year did Arriva last operate a Routemaster? Answers to bustour@open-city.org.uk by Mon 3rd Sept. Winners will be notified.

Win a weekend stay at 5* Hempel Hotel

The Hempel Hotel is London's premier design boutique hotel - a stunning 5* retreat. The sleek architecture, subdued hues, and crisp lines are a study in Zen minimalism. Win a stay over the Open House Weekend, the perfect base from which to explore Open House London.

To enter, answer this question: Which British designer created the boutique Hempel Hotel? Answers to competition@open-city.org.uk by Mon 3rd Sept. The winner will be notified by Tues 4th Sept. The Hempel Hotel will also be giving Open House tours during the event, see p67 thehempel.co.uk

Photography comp with Architect's Journal, The Photographer's Gallery & Lomography

Open-City is inviting submissions for the Open-City 2012 photography competition. Continuing our anniversary theme of 'The changing face of London', take inspiration from the Open House London annual event and capture images of people and places in the capital's ever changing architecture and landscape. This year we've teamed up with The Architects' Journal and The Photographers' Gallery and winning photographs will be published in the AJ and on the Photographers' Gallery website. Entries will be judged by AJ Art Editor Brad Yendle, Photographers' Gallery Director, Brett Rogers and architectural photographer Grant Smith.

openhouselondon.org.uk/competition has details of all our comps criteria, terms and how to enter.

Dig deeper into architecture

See architectural photography, drawings and details of Open House London projects in the AJ Buildings Library. For more information, see online listings and the iPhone app, and entries marked with the red AJ symbol in this guide. The AJ Buildings Library, which contains 1,300 exemplar British schemes, is free to OpenHousers in September.

Satellite events & '48 hours'

For those who struggle to fit everything in to Saturday and Sunday, there's pre-weekend opportunities: an exclusive opportunity to see inside Living Architecture's 'A room for London' on Weds 19th, a talk on play space at Cowcross Galleries on Weds 19th and building tours of the ICE HQ on Friday 21st.

Plus, Saturday night sees some extended late-night openings and events - sometimes with a drink! - including Broadway Market's 'Fabrications' with Q & A session; tours of the Yard Theatre til 11pm; evening film screenings on the floating cinema at the Haggerston 'I was here' event, and also at Kentish Town Community Centre; and Midnight Apothecary: Liquid engineering', cocktails with a difference in the roof garden above the Thames Tunnel at Brunel Museum. Look for the full details against entries with purple dots.

Join us on Friday 21 September for the eighth Maggie's and Open House London Night Hike

Grab your friends, family and colleagues for a 10 or 20-mile walk around late-night London. Enjoy exclusive access to the city's top architectural spaces, as well as food, drink, live music and more. All of this whilst raising money to help people with cancer.

Open House London Anniversary Book

Published by Ebury Press and authored by Victoria Thornton, this beautifully illustrated hardback book provides an insight into 100 of the capital's most architecturally inspiring buildings drawn from the entire 20 years of Open House London - and some of which are open this year. Get your copy now from leading bookshops or online at Amazon. RRP £25.00.

Essential info

The programme listings on the following pages are ordered by borough. There are buildings, plus walks, tours, talks and pre-events are listed at the end. Special events, tours by architects and highlight buildings are flagged up (see icons & abbreviations, right) in the listings. Buildings are also listed by type in the index.

What info can I find in this programme?

You can find listings for each building and event with address, opening days and hours, access to visitors, pre-booking details where relevant, amenities and transport, with bus numbers listed at the end. All main areas are open to the public unless otherwise stated. Also note the colour-coded squares indicating opening days. Light blue means open Saturday only, pink means Sunday only, dark blue means both days. See key listing right.

How do I find out more about the buildings and how to get around?

openhouselondon.org.uk and the iPhone app are your other resources. They build on the information you see in this programme. They have the most up to date listings. You can search for period of architecture, type of building, name of architect or geographical location. You can see where buildings are located and plan your route between them, using the googlemap interface, and also store events in your 'favourites.' There are images and factsheets for most entries. The website also gives you further information on many of our other programmes, and allows you to order further copies of this programme and other related publications.

Keep up to date and share with others on our facebook and twitter feeds @openhouselondon

What will I find when I get to the buildings/events?

At many of the 750 sites, there will be someone to show you around and answer your questions. These are the Open House guides and stewards, and there are thousands of them – some professional, some amateur enthusiast, all volunteering their time and knowledge. In recognition of their role their badge enables them to gain priority access to buildings apart from those that are pre-booking only. For information about volunteering in 2012, please email volunteers@open-city.org.uk.

Do I need to book?

90% of buildings are on a first come basis, however a few of the properties will require you to book in advance. Where this is through the building, contact details are given. Bookings administered by Open House are indicated. For bookings through Open House visit openhouselondon.org.uk/bookings for details of how to make and release bookings online. Spaces are limited and are on a strictly first come, first served basis. Open House regrets that we cannot guarantee availability of places. As places on these tours are restricted please ensure that you attend. Open House is unable to take bookings by phone. NOTE: pre-booking is only open from 10am 16 August – 17 September unless otherwise stated.

What are the terms of entry?

Open House London is a free event in which all sections of the community are invited to participate. Please note that each building's opening, security arrangements and refusal of entry are controlled by individual owners, and entry to each building is on terms and at times specified, over 22 & 23 September 2012. Participation in events and activities is at your own risk. Information in this guide is provided by contributors. Open-City has taken all reasonable care to verify the information provided and cannot accept responsibility for any variation from the details published here. Please do respect building owners and their privacy, and be mindful of photo-taking.

How can I get another copy of the programme?

You can buy copies from:

- open-city.org.uk/shop
 - Foyles - including Flagship Store; Royal Festival Hall; Southbank Centre; www.foyles.co.uk
 - The Building Centre, Store Street WC1
 - RIBA bookshop, 66 Portland Place W1
 - Copies can be picked up free from participating local London libraries from 17 August onwards
- The 2013 Guide will be available to pre-order online from 25 September 2012.

What do the icons and abbreviations in the listings mean?

The key coding below shows facilities on site at each building as listed against entries. The coloured dots pick out highlight events, and the coloured arrows indicate days.

Roe Green Village

■ Meet: Sun 11am and 3pm at Village Green, Roe Lane NW9 9BH. With historian Peter Cormack FSA

Built to provide workers' housing for employees of 'AirCo', Roe Green was designed in the 'garden village' idiom, much influenced by the Arts & Crafts Movement, by Sir Frank Baines, principal architect at HM Office of Works. The housing was a mixture of cottages and 'cottage flats' planned around existing features. Sir Frank Baines 1918-19.

London's Infrastructure Past, Present, Future

The Institution of Civil Engineers (ICE) is proud to partner with Open House London and showcase the vital role of civil engineers in building, maintaining and transforming the capital's infrastructure and built environment.

ICE is organising a series of walks, tours and boat trips to celebrate and explore innovative engineering of the past, present and future including visits to ICE London Award winning projects. Highlights include:

Past

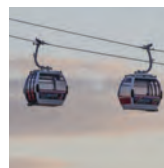

London's rich heritage

- Central London boat tours – London's engineering heritage
- One Great George Street (pictured)
- Brunel Museum
- Abbey Mills Pumping Station

Present

World-class capital

- Walking tour with Thames Estuary Partnership - The changing face of the tidal Thames
- Emirates Air Line (pictured)
- Closed Loop Recycling, Dagenham Plant
- EDF Energy London Eye

Future

Building a city for tomorrow

- Boat tour to the Hoo Peninsula – Engineering East London
- Crossrail - Canary Wharf site visit
- University open days for tomorrow's engineers
