Celebrating architecture, people and place

Over two decades we've seen a major shift in people's attitudes towards the built environment alongside the extraordinary physical transformation of London. Londoners are now more passionate about both their neighbourhoods and their city as a whole than ever before, and more willing to champion the value of good design.

But there is still a long way to go to ensure that Londoners, policymakers and professionals can work together effectively to create a better city.

One of Open-City's best-known programmes – Open House London – has continued to provide a vital open forum for everyone living and working in the city to discuss the importance of quality in architecture and urban design.

Our theme for the 2013 edition of Open House London, 'Celebrating architecture, people and place', underlines our continuing commitment as an organisation to ensuring that everyone has a chance to learn more about London's built environment, and to offer their thoughts and ideas on how it can be improved.

And this year we are launching our first-ever Open Debate, extending the opportunity for you to express your views on what kind of city we are creating.

Victoria Thornton OBE Hon FRIBA
Founding Director

Who we are ... Open-City

Building better connections between people, place and practice

Open-City is London's leading independent, non-profit organisation at the centre of creating better places for and with people. Our mission is

'To champion the value of well-designed places and spaces in making a liveable and vibrant city and the role that everyone plays within it.'

Our work creates the connection that enables Londoners of all ages and backgrounds and those who plan, design, build and manage the city to work together to make places for all.

Our main role is advocating good design and providing people with the tools, skills and resources to do this in their daily lives.

Year-round we develop and deliver training, workshops, seminars, talks, tours and debates in which professionals participate and learn alongside policymakers, the wider community and young people.

The following few pages provide a snapshot of our unique focus as an organisation on 'people, place and practice', how we work and what we've achieved.

How would you describe Open-City as an organisation in three words? We set some of our supporters and partners the challenge of describing Open-City as an organisation in 3 words. Here's what they said ...	'Innovative, imaginative, inspirational' 'Engaging, collaborative, educational'	'Approachable, focused, fun' 'Observant, responsive, integrating'	'Inspired, energetic, effective' 'Involves, enlightens, inspires'

People

People should of course be at the heart of how places are made, but this is not always the case. The urban fabric is one of the determining factors of our lives, but we never learn about it in school and so rarely develop the tools and language to express our views on it.

What is needed is engagement and long-term involvement, not just one-off consultation. Open-City fills this gap by enabling individuals and communities to understand how their city is created and managed. Open House London Weekend offers an open forum for debating architectural quality at first hand for thousands of Londoners every year.

But alongside this, our education and skills initiatives, such as 'Accelerate' and Urban Design Review Forum Training, aim to create a legacy for learning. They provide thousands of young people and adults with useful skills and confidence in offering an informed view on the contemporary city.

Theresa Coyle MBE

is the CEO of Finsbury Park Community Hub, which commissioned Open-City to develop and run a programme engaging local residents in regeneration.

How and why did you partner with Open-City?

We required an organisation that had experience of working with diverse communities that could take the lead and project manage the consultation on master planning, new build, community land trusts, and other bespoke, innovative ideas. We also required an organisation that had in depth knowledge and experience of design, planning and legal matters.

How would you describe Open-City in 3 words?

Professional, experienced, committed.

What would you say is the best way to engage people effectively in their built environment?

At a level that is clear to them, with training, by an experienced trainer giving them a clear understanding of what's in the project for them. No jargon, clear goals and objectives. Most of all patience, respect and understanding.

How has Open-City helped your community to understand urban design issues?

Open-City has an experienced, knowledgeable approach when bringing communities together to look at and learn about urban city designs.

The Andover Future Forum participants have told us that the organisation's bespoke training with easy tools and materials makes the learning fun and exciting, and their ability to allow the resident to participate and take ownership is outstanding.

Place

A high-quality built environment is vital for all aspects of a healthy, prosperous city. It creates the framework in which businesses and communities can thrive, economically, socially and culturally.

Open-City understands and uses the physical fabric of the city as a basis for all its work – we recognised long ago that direct experience is the most powerful way that anyone can learn about urban spaces.

The built environment is much wider than just individual buildings – it is also formed by urban landscape, green spaces and infrastructure. But there remains a major challenge in how we can bring together all these elements to really make places where people want to live and work.

Green Sky Thinking, our annual sustainability-focused programme that takes place in spring (greenskythinking.org.uk), offers a channel for professionals from across built environment disciplines to get a practical and focused opportunity to learn about placemaking from every possible angle and viewpoint.

What do you see as the most important factor in making London a ‘liveable city’?

We asked some of the professionals who work with us throughout the year to tell us their answers:

Good quality, affordable housing is essential in making London liveable, not only to the individuals who live in the city but also to society, the economy and the cultural life of our capital.

Steve Howlett, Chief Executive, Peabody Trust

Integrated planning policy accommodating good architecture and flexibility for today’s environment.

Richard Baldwin, Head of Development, Derwent London plc

Its true architectural stamp – its variety, the clash and the juxtaposition, the old and new, grand and humble jostling for attention.

Robert Elms, BBC London Broadcaster

International architecture practice Make is a long-standing supporter of Open-City. We asked founder Ken Shuttleworth to tell us his thoughts on working with us.

Practice

In recent years there has been a much greater impetus among architects and built environment professionals to get more involved with local communities and to help them create inspiring places.

However, there are still few direct channels for professionals to offer their insights and expertise and to work long-term with wider audiences. The third 'arm' of Open-City's focus is its continuing in-depth partnerships with architects, engineers and many other built environment professionals.

Our programmes also allow architects and other professionals not only to showcase their work – Open House London in particular offers great exposure for new and recent projects – but also to develop their own skills in communicating and presenting their ideas and projects to a wider audience, including teachers and students, and to open up a direct dialogue with potential clients and stakeholders.

How and why did you first work with Open-City?

Make started working with Open-City after learning of two projects that fit with our own Corporate Social Responsibility plans. The first was My City Too, which engaged with young people in deprived areas of London and asked them to engage with their city. The second was Make it Happen, in which we mentored young people from disadvantaged backgrounds and facilitated a project with them where they designed their own neighbourhood. Now we are a partner in the Accelerate into University programme.

How would you describe Open-City as an organisation in 3 words?

Focused, insightful and generous.

What would you say is the main challenge facing the built environment profession today?

It's hard to limit to one; the stumbling global economy is the obvious answer as that is affecting so much, but less obvious and equally as important is the status of the architectural profession both in the public's perception and with the government; and an increasing lack of connection between the various professions.

How do you think Open-City as an organisation has changed the perception of architecture among:

- (a) the public – Open-City has opened the doors of good architecture to everyone.
- (b) politicians – Open-City has done sterling work in pushing the architectural agenda by getting politicians involved in the process such as Ed Vaizey MP, the UK Minister for Culture, Communications and Creative Industries, through the Terry Farrell-led Architecture Review, and Richard Blakeway, the Deputy Mayor for Housing, Land and Property.
- (c) young people – Open-City has enabled young people to become engaged with their built environment, particularly and un-stereotypically, those from disadvantaged and hard to reach backgrounds. This is so valuable for our architects of the future.

Open House London Weekend 2013

Welcome to Open House London 2013...

...your chance to explore your city

Open House London is your chance every year over 48 hours to discover at first hand how good design creates a great city. Whether it's taking a fresh look at your own neighbourhood, exploring somewhere new, seeing projects in development or quizzing the experts, Open House gives you a unique opportunity to learn more about how your city is changing.

This year the Open House London programme showcases over 800 buildings, and construction and engineering sites. It also includes landscape and public realm walks, architects' talks, boat tours and more, completely for FREE.

The listings, starting on page 18, give you all the information you need on when, where and how to take part.

The following section tells you more about how this year's event tackles some of the key themes for London, including engineering, infrastructure, landscape and public realm.

What is behind Open House London?

Each year Open House London gives hundreds of thousands of people the chance to explore their city's architecture and urban design completely for free.

As London's leading architecture education charity, we believe that the best way to understand how well-designed buildings and spaces can have a positive impact on our lives is to experience them at first hand. Doing this enables everyone to build up their knowledge of good design.

Since its inception in 1992, yearly financial support from all quarters – grants, local authorities, sponsors, donations – has to be sought to ensure its sustainability.

But vital to the success of the event is the support of all the property and building owners, managers and administrators who provide a huge amount of time and resources for free in facilitating building openings and creating events, walks and talks. Without their support – and that of the 6000 volunteers who offer their time and expertise as stewards and guides over the weekend – the event simply would not happen.

It is truly a community endeavour!

London's Infrastructure

This year we continue our partnership with the Institution of Civil Engineers (ICE) to present a special showcase of projects. These demonstrate how civil engineering goes beyond the technical to make a major contribution to the sustainable creation and improvement of our built environment. Walks, tours and boat trips celebrate and explore innovative engineering of the past, present and future. You'll also be able to visit ICE London Civil Engineering Award winning projects.

Infrastructure highlights this year include:

transport at London King's Cross Station (p 23), Emirates Airline cable car (p 33), Canary Wharf and Liverpool Street Crossrail construction sites (pp 64 & 27), Blackwall tunnel refurbishment scheme (p 64), and Heathrow pod: Ultra Global Personal Rapid Transit (p 43)

water & waste at Old Ford Waste Water Recycling Facility (p 55), King George V Pumping Station (p 32), Abbey Mills Pumping Station (p 55), Southwark Integrated Waste Management Facility (p 62), Closed Loop Recycling (p 18) and SELCHP (p 53)

energy at The Crystal (p 56) and Bunhill Heat & Power Energy Centre (p 45)

flood risk management at the Thames Barrier (p 34), Lee Tunnel & Beckton Sludge Power Generator (p 55), the tidal Thames walk with Thames Estuary Partnership (p 20), and the ICE Engineering Heritage boat tours (pp 51 & 56) structures at King's Cross (p 23), The Shard (p 62), NEO Bankside (p 61), EDF Energy Eye (p 49), Woolwich Clock Tower (p 34), and Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park canal boat tours (p 56) organised in partnership with London Legacy Development Corporation and with commentary by leading engineers

ICE Award Winners including Exhibition Road (p 48) are flagged in the listings with the ICE logo, and in addition, ICE is offering an exclusive opportunity to visit its HQ, on the Friday afternoon before the event kicks off! (p 72)

See openhouselondon.org.uk/engineering for more on all events. For more details on ICE see ice.org.uk/london

The Transformation of King's Cross

After decades of underinvestment, bomb damage and urban clutter, King's Cross Station is in the final weeks of a full upgrade and restoration. But the regeneration of the surrounding area is only just beginning.

At the heart of one of Europe's busiest transport hubs, the redevelopment of King's Cross Station has given passengers and visitors a modern, award winning facility that is ingeniously integrated with a Grade I listed building.

Award-winning Western Concourse

CGI of King's Cross Square

John McAslan's Western Concourse, with its soaring half dome roof, opened in March 2012. It complements the fully re-glazed twin barrel roof of the main train shed and the restored Eastern and Western ranges.

In a few weeks' time, with the completion of King's Cross Square designed by Stanton Williams, London will not only have its newest public space, but also a restored icon, as Lewis Cubitt's magnificent Victorian façade will be revealed for the first time in more than 150 years.

And it is not only passengers that have benefited. The public investment has given businesses, both local and international, the confidence to invest and transform the area from a place infamous for its less than salubrious trades into a thriving, exciting centre for business, knowledge and the arts.

Use the map to find your way around the largest ever King's Cross showcase this year, with tours and events including:

- 01 King's Cross Station itself, with an exclusive climb up the clock tower (p 23)
- 02 Estate tours around the Kings Cross Central redevelopment (p 25)
- 03 'Across the buildings' by Felice Varini - viewing platform
- 04 Global Generation Skip Garden (p 23)
- 05 St Pancras International (p 25)
- 06 King's Cross Construction Skills Centre (p 23)
- 07 ACE King's Cross Engineering Trail
- 08 Great Northern Hotel

The Future of Your City

During Open House London you can see at first hand major schemes that are changing the face of London. Hear from, and discuss your views with, the experts on site.

OPEN SITE

Convoys Wharf, Deptford

Convoys Wharf (p 52) is a major proposed regeneration scheme of 16ha of Deptford riverside by Hutchison Whampoa with Terry Farrell & Partners. On Saturday 21st September, drop in to the Open Site event and see the exhibition of the proposed masterplan in the historic warehouse, talk to the project consultants and architects, and visit the pop-up riverside café.

Other Open Site events are taking place at:

- Battersea Power Station: hosting site visits as part of Open House for the first time; and the last opportunity to see it before the full 38-acre site undergoes redevelopment (p 68)
- British Museum, World Conservation and Exhibition Centre: transforming the way the British Museum displays and looks after its collection (p 22)
- Crossrail construction sites at Liverpool Street and Canary Wharf (pp 27 & 64)
- Dane's Yard in Stratford: a major new neighbourhood for East London (p 55)
- Tate Modern Project: providing more space for displaying the Tate collection (p 62)

THE TRANSFORMATION OF LONDON

Nine Elms

Nine Elms (p 69) on the South Bank is the largest regeneration zone in central London. This year, get an insider look at progress on the new landmark developments at Embassy Gardens; Riverlight, which will be the first development completed on site; and Battersea Power Station's temporary riverfront park.

Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park

Expert-led walks, events and openings give you an in-depth view of the transformation of the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park and surrounding areas, including the Lea Valley Drift and North Park walks (p 56), boat tours around South Park taking in views of the stadium with London Legacy Development Corporation and ICE (p 56), and tours of the newly transformed Olympic Village – now East Village and a new community with homes, academy and health centre (p 55).

Explore the effects of regeneration in neighbouring areas with events at Hackney Wick and Fish Island (p 36), the little-known Cody Dock (p 55), and Lea Valley walks and urban jogs (p 56).

Uncovering the hidden role of structural engineers

This year Open House brings a greater focus to the achievements of structural engineers with many professionals on site explaining their role – look for the E code against listings. Key showcase events include:

- 10 projects engineered by Elliott Wood: Kentish Town Health Centre (p 23), North London Hospice (p 32), Jerwood Space (p 61), The Sutton Life Centre (p 63), 147 de Beauvoir Road (p 35), The Jewel Box (p 47), Horniman Museum (p 52), 49 Camberwell Grove (p 60), Robin Grove music room (p 24), and the practice's self-designed Head Office (studios) at 241 The Broadway (p 54).
- NEO Bankside (p 61), a landmark housing development designed by Rogers Stirk Harbour & Partners and engineered by Waterman Group, and jointly developed by Native Land and Grosvenor.

- Ramboll at Woolwich Clocktower (p 34): when the historic clocktower at the Royal Woolwich Arsenal suffered almost total destruction in an accident, Ramboll's structural engineers salvaged and reused more than 85% of its original materials. Hear on site how they achieved this.

London Landscape

Landscape Institute
Inspiring great places

This year's Open House London features nearly 80 projects with landscape at their heart, in a programme partnered with the Landscape Institute. Each one shows how investment in landscape is changing the face of London and delivering beauty, diversity and a sense of place in our busy city.

Landscape & public realm highlights include:

Landscape architect-led walks: Ian Hingley from Urban Movement leads walks of Clapham Old Town & Venn Street (p 51) – showing how an improved public realm is reconnecting the Old Town to the Common – and Camden High Street & Britannia Junction (p 25), where reclaiming carriageway has created more generous footways, and Dominic Cole of Dominic Cole Landscape Architects provides a garden tour of Fulham Palace (p 39).

Future Landscape vision and next generation walks with New London Landscape award entrants:

Rediscovering London's Drover's Road (p 38) retraces the historic route used to drive cattle into London's markets; Street Orchard is a proposal to plant fruit trees at bus stops all over London via a walk through Shoreditch. Includes a full scale installation to see how it would operate (p 38).

Other highlights include: large-scale public realm projects at Granary Square (p 23), Leicester Square (p 74), Exhibition Road (p 48), Woolwich Squares Croydon landscapes (p 34), High Street 2012 (p 66), Bankside Urban Forest (p 62) and Nine Elms (p 69); and urban parks at the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park North (p 56), Jubilee Gardens (p 50), Bishop's Park (p 39), Gunnersbury Park (p 44), Walpole Park (p 31) and Burgess Park (p 62).

Venture out for a night of discovery, culture, architecture and surprise while raising money for Maggie's Cancer Centres on Maggie's Culture Crawl

A 15-mile night-time hike-come-adventure around London in partnership with Open House, Maggie's Culture Crawl is our new take on last year's Night Hike. As you wind your way around the capital, you'll get exclusive access to wonderful buildings such as the EDF Energy London Eye, the Gherkin and the Foreign Office and see spectacular performances from musicians, dancers and artists. There will also be some delicious food and tea along the way. It'll be a night of many experiences, many stories and hopefully not too many blisters. As with last year, places are limited so sign up today. Visit maggiescentres.org/culturecrawl or call 0300 123 1801

BBC London and Open House

Robert Elms Show Monday to Fridays 12-3pm and Saturdays 9am-12noon
BBC London 94.9FM

"When Open House throws open the portals of so many otherwise inaccessible London buildings, it also opens our eyes to the surprising variety of architectural wonders in our midst and our minds to infinite possibilities of the built environment.

For years now we have covered this staggeringly successful cultural event with relish on my daily show on BBC London 94.9. Every year we receive an avalanche of calls and e-mails from people eager to know more about the opportunities afforded by this unique extravaganza of the edifice. They are hungry to see behind the façades, to learn the tales and the techniques that all buildings have to tell.

So yet again in nearly every London Borough, Londoners will learn a little more about the city we all share, and BBC London 94.9 will of course be with them."

Essential information

The programme listings on the following pages are ordered by borough. There are buildings, plus walks, tours, talks and pre-events are listed at the end. Special events, tours by architects and highlight buildings are flagged up (see icons & abbreviations, right) in the listings. Buildings are also listed by type in the index.

How do I take part? Do I need to book in advance?

The vast majority of buildings are on a first come basis, in line with our mission as an organisation to make architecture accessible to all. However, a few of the properties will require you to book in advance through them and contact details are given. This year there are no bookings administered by Open House as we go back to the true ethos of the event. Pre-booking through the buildings opens from 15th August only; please don't contact the buildings prior to this date.

Four buildings are running a ballot for admission and this is through Open House. Those are 10 Downing Street, The View from the Shard, EDF Energy London Eye and Staple Inn. The ballots will close on Friday 13 September. Go to openhouselondon.org.uk/ballots to enter.

What info can I find in this programme?

The buildings are in a geographical order by borough, and then by alphabetical order to reflect each of the local authority partners. For each building and event, you can find its listing with address, opening days and hours, access to visitors, pre-booking details where relevant, amenities and transport, with bus numbers listed at the end. All main areas are open to the public unless otherwise stated. Also note the colour-coded squares indicating opening days. ■ Light blue means open Saturday only, ■ pink means Sunday only, ■ dark blue means both days. See key listing right.

How do I find out more about the buildings and how to get around?

openhouselondon.org.uk and the iPhone app are your other resources. They build on the information you see in this programme. They have the most up to date listings. You can search for period of architecture, type of building, name of architect or geographical location. You can see where buildings are located and plan your route between them, using the map interface. There are images and factsheets for most entries. The website also gives you further information on many of our other programmes, and allows you to order further copies of this programme and other related publications.

Keep up to date and share with others on our facebook and twitter feeds @openhouselondon

What will I find when I get to the buildings/events?

At many of the 830 sites, there will be someone to show you around and answer your questions. These are the Open House guides and stewards, and there are thousands of them – some professional, some amateur enthusiast, all volunteering their time and knowledge. In recognition of their role their badge enables them to gain priority access to buildings apart from those that are pre-booking only. For information about volunteering in 2013, please email volunteers@open-city.org.uk.

What are the terms of entry?

Open House London is a free event in which all sections of the community are invited to participate. Please note that each building's opening, security arrangements and refusal of entry are controlled by individual owners, and entry to each building is on terms and at times specified, over 21 & 22 September 2013. Participation in events and activities is at your own risk. Information in this guide is provided by contributors. Open-City has taken all reasonable care to verify the information provided and cannot accept responsibility for any variation from the details published here. Please do respect building owners and their privacy, and be mindful of photo-taking.

How can I get another copy of the programme?

You can buy copies from:

- open-city.org.uk/shop
 - Foyles - including Flagship Store; Royal Festival Hall; Southbank Centre; foyles.co.uk
 - The Building Centre, Store Street WC1
 - RIBA bookshop, 66 Portland Place W1
 - Copies can be picked up free from participating local London libraries from 15 August onwards
- The 2014 Guide will be available to pre-order online from 23 September 2013.

What do the icons and abbreviations in the listings mean?

The key coding below shows facilities on site at each building as listed against entries. The coloured dots pick out highlight events, and the coloured squares indicate days.

Haringey Council works to preserve the historic buildings in the borough and encourage good modern design, to help create a high-quality environment. The Haringey Design Awards celebrate high quality buildings and places that make a positive contribution to Haringey's built environment.

The Haringey Design Panel is an independent advisory body that provides design advice on key development proposals to both applicants and officers. Planning and Design Development Forums are held for all major development proposals. Key guidance on greening buildings is provided in the form of the Greening Your Home Guide and Sustainable Design & Construction SPD.
